6 Strategies for Engaging Boys In The Classroom. Engaging male students is a matter of concern for many educators, judging by professional development books and conference sessions we see, as well as conversations with other teachers. Historically, boys have been out-performed in the K-12 classroom by girls, though they have performed somewhat evenly on national standardized tests such as the ACT and SAT.

6 Strategies For Engaging Boys In The Classroom

Teaching boys is like being a cross between a matador and a traffic cop. Keep on the move and mingle with the crowd. Boys see things best in motion. Use visuals and animations as often as you can. As James (2009) notes boys love targeting. If you have ever watched boys place rubbish into bins you will see that they don't place it, they take a shot.

Teaching Boys - Andrew Fuller

Here are some ways of getting boys to learn that differ from girls. Keep boys active. Boys will often fidget more in the classroom than girls, swaying on their chair or doodling with a pen and paper. Quite often this is not out of defiance – it is simply because boys feel the urge to stay active more.

Boys vs Girls: Teaching Strategies | BuildingBoys

Teachers tended to view the natural assets that boys bring to learning—impulsivity, single-task focus, spatial-kinesthetic learning, and physical aggression—as problems. By altering strategies to accommodate these more typically male assets, Douglass helped its students succeed, as the following vignettes illustrate.
