The Making Of The Middle

The Making of the Middle Ages is a study of the period 972 to 1204. Before Southern wrote this book in 1952, the period has traditionally been called the High Middle Ages or the "Renaissance of the 12th Century".

Put simply, the subtitle of 'War, Deceit, Imperial Folly and the making of the modern Middle East' is a far more apt designation for Scott Anderson's work. Anderson gives the reader an intriguing cast of characters, whose stories are told through an almost fiction-like narrative from the perspective of four main players, with a 'supporting cast' filling in the blanks to make for a compelling historical account.
